	Course Number	2003	3103
	Catalog Description	Supports critical reflective thinking, which will provide students with foundational tools to address the issues of diversity within visual culture and their relationship to societal, curricular, and pedagogical practices.	Investigates various issues of diversity and equity in relation to art and education. It discusses the application of the theories of diversity and equity into teaching, community organizing, activism, and art practices.
	Cross-listed with:	Diversity, Pedagogy, Visual Culture	Diversity, Pedagogy, Visual Culture
	Justification	This course supports critical reflective thinking, which will provide students with foundational tools to address the issues of diversity within visual culture and their relationship to societal, curricular, and pedagogical practices.	AAST 2003 was primarily focused on theories of diversity and equity and the analysis of art and visual culture through those lenses. As an introductory level diversity course, this course aimed at broadening and deepening the understandings of sociocultural issues including, but not limited to, race, gender, class, and (dis)ability.  By changing the course level to 3000-level, the course will focus on not only theoretical discussions on the intersectionality of race, gender, class, and (dis)ability, but also applications of those theories into art, pedagogical, and community practices. Therefore, students who are taking this course will be invited to design their own project, such as public art project, lesson plans for K-12 schools, museum education programs, and community-based activism. This type of engagement requires foundational knowledge and background in their major studies. Thus, the course should be listed in 3000 level.

	Catalog Description	Detailed consideration of anthropological theory through study of its historical development. The research paper in this course fulfills the Fulbright College research paper requirement for anthropology majors.	Detailed consideration of anthropological theory through study of its historical development. The research paper fulfills the Fulbright College Writing Requirement for anthropology majors.
	Justification	History of Anthropological Thought (ANTH 4013) surveys key figures, shifting paradigms, and shifting aspirations for the discipline of anthropology. The course is the capstone course for the Anthropology major. It meets the General Education Requirement standards as a core curriculum course. The specific requirements this course addresses are Learning Outcome 6.1, Learning Outcomes 3.2 and 3.3, Learning Outcomes 4.1, and Learning Outcomes 5.1.  This course aims to allow students to master the theories and methodologies that have been foundational to the discipline of anthropology. This course provides students with a knowledge of cultural diversity as well as the theories anthropologists have created to approximate and communicate that diversity. The course contributes to an overall understanding of culture, society, and the ethics and methods developed to do research with people. Written essays—a written paper, as well as a 1250 word essay— and in class presentations and discussions give students the opportunity to show comprehension of theory and connect these theories to the world we live in. Ethnographic exercises will also give students the opportunity to practice ethnographic research, one of the signature contributions of anthropology to the humanities and social sciences.	The course was approved for learning outcomes 3.2, 3.3, 4.1, 5.1, and 6.1 in Spring 2020. The General Education Curriculum Committee also pointed out that the course qualified for learning outcome 1.2, as the course allows students to strengthen communication skills.

To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)

- a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise.
- b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work.
- c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose.
- d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness.
- e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.

Learning Outcome 1.2: Upon reaching this goal, students will be able to communicate with a variety of audiences not only in writing but also by speaking and using a range of electronic and digital modes

1.2 a. Students complete written and oral assignments on anthropological thought with special attention to how to communicate ideas for anthropological and non-anthropological audiences. Instructor feedback on oral and written presentations also guide students in revision of their work.

1.2 b. Students complete both written and oral presentations: over 12 pages of prose over three assignments, all based on analyzing anthropological texts, as well as an oral ethnography presentation.

1.2 c. Given specific assignment instructions on analyzing anthropological texts, and then given exercises where they practice explaining anthropological ideas and cultural contexts for people unfamiliar with those cultural worlds, students learn how to integrate content in written, oral, and multi-media presentations appropriate to anthropological subjects, academic and non-academic audiences, and purposes of communication.

1.2 d. Instructor feedback on student presentations and written assignments allows students to learn from the revision process (along with reflection on what they have learned from revision).

1.2 e. Students, in written papers, cite both secondary, bibliographic material as they analyze the history of anthropological thought; in conducting their own ethnographic research projects, students also learn how to cite their own primary, observation source material.

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Homework assignments, class presentations on texts, midterm and essay questions, a sample ethnographic assignment, and a 1250 word essay on what makes anthropology anthropological and overall student performance over time will be used to assess student achievement of the Learning Outcomes.

	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify fundamental concepts, structures, themes, and principles of the discipline being introduced. c. produce a reasonable short essay about the material introduced in the course. d. interpret texts and other created artifacts within multiple historical, intellectual, and cultural contexts. e. draw connections among cultural achievements of various groups of people of different ethnicities, religious backgrounds, racial origins, and sexual identities.

How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.

- a. Identify fundamental concepts, structures, themes, and principles of the discipline being introduced.
  - In this course, students are required to be able to identify and use fundamental Arabic vocabulary and grammar structures, as well as cultural knowledge of the Arabic-speaking world.
- c. Produce a reasonable short essay about the material introduced in the course.
  - Students are required to write a composition in Arabic about cultural topics presented in readings and video clips throughout the course.
- d. Interpret texts and other created artifacts within multiple historical, intellectual, and cultural contexts
  - Students are required to read and discuss authentic texts and video clips describing the historical and cultural context of Arabic speaking peoples.
- e. Draw connections among cultural achievements of various groups of people of different ethnicities, religious backgrounds, racial origins, and sexual identities.
  - Students are required to learn about, discuss, and make connections between their own culture's cultural achievements and those of the people of the Arabic-speaking world.

How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.

- a. Examine and interpret an intercultural experience from both one's own and another's worldview.
- Students are required to examine a number of intercultural experiences from their own worldview and compare the worldview of peoples of the Arabic-speaking world. A couple of examples include looking at hobbies and pastimes, differences in educational systems and social practices such as dating.
- b. Articulate the essential tenets of a cultural worldview other than one's own through an analysis of its components, including but not limited to history, values, communication styles, politics, economy, and beliefs and practices
- In this course, students are required to articulate some of the essential tenets of the worldview of Arabic-speaking peoples as they examine its history, values, and other aspects through readings and film.
- c. Identify and participate in cultural differences in verbal and nonverbal communication
- Students must learn how to communicate both verbally and nonverbally (through expression, actions, etc.) with peoples of the Arabic-speaking world. Their attention is drawn to differences between these aspects of communication in their own culture and the cultures of Arabic speakers.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.

1. Engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise.

Students will be trained to apply critical thinking in analyzing texts and their rhetorical situations. Discussions, papers, and class activities will model such practices while emphasizing socio-historical, political contexts, class, gender, sexual orientation, etc. Students will submit written reflections regularly, where they will reflect on the reading and engage with it in written form before engaging with it orally in class and through presentations, Blackboard discussion board, etc. On their presentation day, students are expected to lead the class discussion as well. The presentation should be at least 20 minutes but can last the whole class period if a fruitful discussion ensues. Students will receive feedback on class presentations from the professor and their peers. In addition, feedback will be received on two short papers that students are expected to revise based on feedback.

2. Complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations, that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work.

Students will complete several written assignments both in English and in Arabic:

- two papers in Arabic (2 pages each).
- a response paper on each assigned reading (1 page single-spaced), in Arabic or English, but students will be expected to discuss the topic in Arabic).
- a handout to accompany their class presentation (one page in Arabic) summarizing, evaluating, and posing questions on the reading.
- final project (6-8 pages in English).
- capstone reflective essay (5-6 pages in English).

3. Integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose.

Students are expected to synthesize material read in this and in other classes, or read on their own, as relevant to the topic discussed/ presented on and use it effectively either in argument or for exposition.

4. Incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness.

- Professor feedback on papers will help students revise two short papers and develop ideas in one of them into a final project

How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Scores will be recorded for all of the following components:            1) Essays in Arabic.            2) Response papers that ask students to summarize, reflect, and raise questions about the readings.            3) Presentations where students present a certain text and lead class discussion.            4) Final project
To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities.            d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency.            e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Students write two short papers in Arabic and a 6-8 page paper in English where they demonstrate competence at the tools and concepts they have learned in this course. The 1250-word (minimum) reflective essay includes the students' self-assessment regarding three indicators. Indicator A: On a weekly basis throughout the course, students practice and develop their written and oral abilities in a variety of ways. They read primary sources in Arabic and write 1-page response papers in Arabic and English and then engage in discussions about the readings in Arabic. In addition, students do an oral presentation with an option to include a PowerPoint slideshow involving leading a class discussion on one of the primary source readings or secondary source articles introduced in the class. They are required to include a handout for students, which further employs writing skills. The PowerPoint enhances their multimodal communication skills. Furthermore, students write and revise two short papers in Arabic, a 6-8- page paper in English, and a 5-6-page reflective essay in English. Indicator D: Students use the concepts and structures introduced in readings and discussions to reflect on and analyze cultural difference, therefore enriching their intercultural competency. They start to recognize cultural differences between the U.S. and the Arab World, for example, where difference does not denote superiority or inferiority. At the same time students recognize the diversity of the Arab World itself and think about the different "cultures" existent in the region. Indicator E: the development of critical thinking skills is crucial for facilitating indicators A D. Reading material and class discussions teach students critical thinking skills through examples and practice. Students learn the importance of analysis and sociohistorical context. They learn to provide evidence from the text that aids their analysis and interpretation of texts.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.

A. Students will apply critical thinking in analyzing texts and their rhetorical situations. Discussions, papers, and class activities will model such practices while emphasizing socio-historical, political contexts, class, gender, sexual orientation, etc. Students will submit reflections regularly, where they engage with reading assignments in writing form before engaging with it orally in class and through presentations, Blackboard discussion board, etc. On their presentation day, students are expected to lead the class discussion. The presentation should be at least 20 minutes but can last the whole class period if a fruitful discussion ensues. Students will receive feedback on class presentations from the professor and their peers. In addition, feedback will be received on two short papers which students will revise based on feedback. Students will also workshop their final project in class and are expected to incorporate peer and teacher feedback as relevant.

B. Students will complete several written assignments both in English and in Arabic:

- two papers in Arabic (2 pages each).
- a response paper on each assigned reading (1 page single-spaced), in Arabic or English, but students will be expected to discuss the topic in Arabic).
- a handout accompanying class presentation (one page in Arabic) summarizing, evaluating, and posing questions on the reading + bibliography (in Arabic or English).
- a summary of final project workshoped/presented in class (1 page in English).
- final project (6-8 pages in English).
- capstone reflective essay (5-6 pages in English).

C. Students will synthesize material from this and other classes as relevant to the topic discussed/presented on, and use it effectively either in argument or for exposition.

- Professor's feedback on papers will help students revise two short papers and expand one of them into a final project if they so choose.
- Peer feedback and questions during presentations and class discussion-leading will help students revise and/or reformulate arguments.
- Feedback on final project will help students consider other perspectives.
- In-class and Blackboard discussion board, when applicable, will serve as a platform for constant feedback as students engage with each other's ideas.

- integrate relevant primary sources read in this and other classes, or on their own.
- incorporate as relevant: secondary sources suggested by their professor, their peers (for examples in bibliographies provided with class presentations), or read in other classes.
- synthesize material gained from both to form an effective argument.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Students write two short papers in Arabic and a 6-8 page paper in English where they demonstrate competence at the tools and concepts they have learned in this course. The 1250-word (minimum) reflective essay includes the students' self-assessment regarding three indicators. Indicator C: Since Arabic is an interdisciplinary field, the course trains students in critical frameworks from literature and cultural studies. This helps them learn and identify the fundamental concepts, structures, themes, and principles of the field. Through class discussions and assignments, students learn to interpret texts and other created artifacts (such as film, fiction, or nonfiction) within multiple historical, intellectual, and cultural contexts (Goal 3). They also learn to draw connections among cultural achievements of various groups of people of different ethnicities, religious backgrounds, racial origins, and sexual identities (Goal 3). Finally, they produce reasonable short essays in Arabic on the material introduced in the course (Goal 3). Indicator D: Students use the concepts and structures listed above to reflect on and analyze cultural difference, therefore enriching their intercultural competency. They start to recognize cultural differences between the U.S. and the Arab World, for example, where difference does not denote superiority or inferiority. At the same time students recognize the diversity of the Arab World itself and think about the different "cultures" existent in the region. Indicator E: the development of critical thinking skills is crucial for facilitating indicators C D. Reading material and class discussions teach students critical thinking skills through examples and practice. Students learn the importance of analysis and sociohistorical context. They learn to provide evidence from the text that aids their analysis and interpretation of texts.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Scores will be recorded for all of the following components: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1) Essays in Arabic.</li> <li>2) Response papers that ask students to summarize, reflect, and raise questions about the readings.</li> <li>3) Presentations where students present a certain text and lead class discussion.</li> <li>4) Final project</li> <li>5) Reflective essay</li> </ol>

	Justification	The co-requisite course of ARCH 4154 no longer available. It became ARCH 4152. Rollback from Global was to correct the one time we offered this course in Rome. It is and will remain on-campus only.	This course proposes to meet General Education Learning Outcome 6.1
	Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities. c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major. e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		1. Students in the Integrated Design Studio will produce a significant written paper that outlines the integration of building systems and their importance to the creation of a sustainable environment. 2. Students shall produce a significant written document that expands upon the decision making undergone throughout the development of their studio project, including the learning that took place between the studio course and its companion course dedicated to the integration of building technologies. This paper will examine the testing of different simulation processes and how they affected building form and space, the understanding of environmental systems and how their knowledge growth in this subject area influenced their design decisions, their growing understanding of passive and active heating and cooling strategies, as well as numerous other learning outcomes born from a deep examination of the integration of building technologies and systems. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• This paper shall become part of the student's oral project presentation and shall include diagrams and other forms of visualization that will enable a clear description of their understanding of the principles learned in the class.</li> <li>• This paper shall include quantitative outcomes through the testing of various energy models, lighting strategies, structural strategies, and environment behavior scenarios studied in class.</li> <li>• The paper shall also examine the projects cultural perspectives and the importance of the project and its development for the community that it serves.</li> <li>• The paper should address the awareness of diversity and its importance and impact on designed spaces, objects, as well as its influence on ways of thinking and acting in the world.</li> <li>• By synthesizing the knowledge gained in the class, both through qualitative and quantitative reasoning, the paper shall enhance the student's critical thinking skills as well as improve their capacity for ethical reasoning.</li> </ul>
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		In addition to the required written document, data will be collected from visual portfolios, multiple presentations, readings and discussions.

ARED 3003	Proposed Effective Date	Fall 2019	Fall 2021
	Justification	This course will provide practical knowledge of curriculum design and instructional strategies that are applicable to both K-12 schools and community-settings. The main content of the course, which includes significant theories about art education and integrated curriculum, lays the foundation for other teaching practicum courses.	This course was adjusted to clarify how ARED 3003, Curriculum Design and Teaching Practices in Art Education meets Learning Outcome 1.2.

Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise. b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work. c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose. d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness. e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.
How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.		Students will meet the five Learning Outcomes 1.2 by learning how to write art curriculum using images and citing sources that compliments the current Arkansas public school curriculum frameworks. Based on feedback, students will revise curriculum and orally present using images and other resources to enhance pedagogy based on the specific group of students.

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Data collected from students will be in the form of written curriculum with images and cited sources based on curriculum models, theories, and pedagogy introduced in the coursework. Students will also orally present curriculum that has been revised based on feedback based on the context of the learning environment.

	Catalog Description	Supports critical reflective thinking, which will provide students with foundational tools to address the issues of diversity within visual culture and their relationship to societal, curricular, and pedagogical practices.	Investigates various issues of diversity and equity in relation to art and education. It discusses the application of the theories of diversity and equity into teaching, community organizing, activism, and art practices.
	Cross-listed with: Justification	Diversity, Pedagogy, Visual Culture Matching updated information with its AAST 2003 cross-listing.	ARED 2003 was primarily focused on theories of diversity and equity and the analysis of art and visual culture through those lenses. As an introductory level diversity course, this course aimed at broadening and deepening the understandings of sociocultural issues including, but not limited to, race, gender, class, and (dis)ability.  By changing the course level to 3000-level, the course will focus on not only theoretical discussions on the intersectionality of race, gender, class, and (dis)ability, but also applications of those theories into art, pedagogical, and community practices. Therefore, students who are taking this course will be invited to design their own project, such as public art project, lesson plans for K-12 schools, museum education programs, and community-based activism. This type of engagement requires foundational knowledge and background in their major studies. Thus, the course should be listed in 3000 level.

	Is course a General Education Course?	No	Yes

Justification	This course is designed as a course number for rotating topics for art history courses to be offered during intersession. It is intended that all art history classes offered during intersession will be offered under this course number. This is designed to ensure that all intersession classes will be specifically designed for the intersession format and will have the appropriate in-depth subject focus; this will prevent intersession courses being offered that would simply attempt to cram material from a semester-long class into the intersession format -- something we deem pedagogically inappropriate for our field. We have found that well-designed case studies classes, of the type similar to the sample syllabus attached here, are extremely successful in the intersession format, but that the content of regular upper division classes do not translate seamlessly into the intersession format. In addition, the intersession format does not allow adequate time for students to do research projects and learn research skills. Given our library holdings many research projects in our field require time to receive materials from Interlibrary Loan as well as to read large numbers of secondary sources. Hence we want to be able to limit the number of intersession classes to three to provide adequate training in research for our art history majors. Having a separate course number for intersession classes (this course is limited to being repeated for up to 9 hours) will also accomplish this goal.	modification of class to meet Learning outcome 1.2
Additional Notes	The topic of this class would rotate according to the instructor offering the class.

	Justification	Ancient Greek culture has had extensive influence over the art, architecture, and study of art history in the Western world, making it an essential subject for any art student. Currently, the only ancient art course offered in Art History is ARHS 4833, a broad, but shallow chronological survey of the art and architecture in the Near East, Egypt, Greece, and Rome. The course proposed provides students with a more in-depth study of Greek visual and material culture, allowing for a more detailed understanding of the technical and stylistic developments and critical approaches and methodologies used in the field, as well as hands-on experience analyzing ancient Greek artifacts from the University Museum collections. As an upper-level ARHS course with a graduate section, the course counts toward the major requirements for the BA in Art History and Studio Art and the BFA in Studio Art and Education, as well as the MFA. Additionally, the course will fulfill the Fulbright College upper-level writing requirement for School of Art majors. Looking ahead, as the Art Department transitions to become the School of Art, course offerings will need to expand to meet the anticipated increase in undergraduate majors and minors. Under the new School of Art, Art History plans to grow with the creation of an MA program, further necessitating an increase in the number of graduate-level ARHS courses. This course contributes in both respects, and, cross-listed with CLST, strengthens the School of Art's interdisciplinary connections.	modification of class to meet learning outcome 1.2

	Justification	Ancient Roman culture has had extensive influence over the art, architecture, and study of art history in the Western world, making it an essential subject for any art student. Currently, the only ancient art course offered in Art History is ARHS 4833, a broad, but shallow chronological survey of the art and architecture in the Near East, Egypt, Greece, and Rome. The course proposed provides students with a more in-depth study of Roman visual and material culture, allowing for a more detailed understanding of the technical and stylistic developments and critical approaches and methodologies used in the field, as well as hands-on experience analyzing ancient Roman artifacts from the University Museum collections. As an upper-level ARHS course with a graduate section, the course counts toward the major requirements for the BA in Art History and Studio Art and the BFA in Studio Art and Education, as well as the MFA. Additionally, the course will fulfill the Fulbright College upper-level writing requirement for School of Art majors. Looking ahead, as the Art Department transitions to become the School of Art, course offerings will need to expand to meet the anticipated increase in undergraduate majors and minors. Under the new School of Art, Art History plans to grow with the creation of an MA program, further necessitating an increase in the number of graduate-level ARHS courses. This course contributes in both respects, and, cross-listed with CLST, strengthens the School of Art's interdisciplinary connections.	modification of course to meet 1.2 Learning outcome

They prepare for this final assignment through the writing weekly responses to the assigned readings (both primary and secondary), a regular exercise designed to hone their ability to evaluate scholarly arguments and formulate provocative questions in response. Finally, rather than test their ability to rehash rote material, the midterm and final exams, which are both essay based, offer students the opportunity to demonstrate creative, critical, and synthetic thinking skills by requiring them to make connections across lectures and readings. They are taught from the start that “A” answers must go beyond the mere recitation of facts to offer original analysis and interpretation.

Catalog Description	Subject matter not covered in regularly offered courses, and relating to the history of art before the nineteenth century. May be repeated for different topics.	Subject matter not covered in regularly offered courses, and relating to the history of art before the eighteenth century. May be repeated for different topics.
Justification	Admin update to undergrad only for dual level conversion. New grad level course is ARHS 5983.	Modification of course to meet Learning outcome 1.2. Also modifying course to meet Group 1 time frame change to date pre-eighteenth century, not pre-nineteenth century. In addition, removing the limitation on the number of times the class can be retaken for different topics, since we want to have the option to introduce new topics more frequently to add more varied content to the curriculum more frequently.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.		Students in this course complete two formal writing assignments, as well as weekly reading responses, which together exceed the 12 page minimum requirement. In addition, students give two presentations over the course of the semester, each of which is 10-15 in length. The assignments build on one another and designed to teach students the fundamentals of academic research and writing, with emphasis placed on the revision process. For example, the first assignment is a proposal and annotated bibliography, which is written in preparation for their final research paper, which they present to the group at the end of the semester. The final paper consists of a research paper, which must analyze primary sources (artworks) and incorporate at least five scholarly sources. In addition to extensive feedback on their written assignments from the professor (which they are expected to incorporate into their final paper), the final paper undergoes peer-editing. In this component, students are evaluated on both the clarity, usefulness, and precision of the feedback they offer on their partner's draft, as well as their ability to address their partner's feedback in their own final paper.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		a. synthesize the development over time of the fundamental concepts, principles, theories, and methods, creative practices and techniques of the visual and/or performing arts. b. develop an understanding of how historical, social, cultural, and personal forces shape artistic communication and how the arts in turn share the diverse cultures of past and present societies. c. respond critically to a variety of works in the arts, connecting the individual work in the creative discipline being introduced to other aspects of human thought and endeavor.
	How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.		Art Lecture provides a basic introduction of the visual arts from the Ancient, Medieval, Renaissance, Baroque, and Modern periods (18th-21st century). Attention is given to art's function in society and its development within broader global contexts. Students gain visual literacy and an understanding of the vocabulary, terminology and concepts of the visual arts and how art relates to and informs popular culture.

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The course is divided into 4 sections, with weekly short quizzes along with section exams. (Sample questions attached.) In addition students regularly contribute to the online discussion board on visiting artist/scholar lectures and write art historical/cultural analyses of works in the Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art collection.

Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise. b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work. c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose. d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness. e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.

	How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.		The assignments for this course achieve learning outcomes 1.2 by the following metrics: The two papers, along with the weekly reading responses, exceed the 12 page minimum. The "tiered" (or two-part structure) of the first and second paper assignments are explicitly designed to teach students the fundamentals of academic research and writing, including the formulation (and revision of) compelling, logically-developed arguments, as well as practice in identifying and applying appropriate forms of primary and secondary evidence to support their own (original) arguments. Not only do they receive extensive written feedback on their first assignment from the professor, which they are expected to incorporate into their final paper, the first paper is itself structured around a peer-editing component. In this component, students are evaluated on both the clarity, usefulness, and precision of the feedback they offer on their partner's draft, as well as their ability to address their partner's feedback in their own final paper. The first paper—a visual analysis—is focused exclusively on primary source research (an art object of their choosing), while the second paper—a reading analysis—requires targeted secondary source research. They prepare for this final assignment through the writing weekly responses to the assigned readings (both primary and secondary), a regular exercise designed to hone their ability to evaluate scholarly arguments and formulate provocative questions in response. Finally, rather than test their ability to rehash rote material, the midterm and final exams, which are both essay based, offer students the opportunity to demonstrate creative, critical, and synthetic thinking skills by requiring them to make connections across lectures and readings. They are taught from the start that "A" answers must go beyond the mere recitation of facts to offer original analysis and interpretation.

	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities. c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major. d. 	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Students in this course produce a body of work requiring substantial self-direction and/or the use of skills and methods acquired in previous courses. Successful projects reflect not only students' expertise in their chosen media but an awareness of how their studio practice resides within the larger context of the arts and contemporary cultural discourse, including awareness of diversity and interculturality. Students will demonstrate critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning in the formation and written/verbal explanations of their projects as well as in critical review of their peers' projects, and/or distinct writing assignments as specified by the instructor.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Progress is monitored throughout the course via student communication with instructor as well as peer communication facilitated by the instructor. The instructor collects students' portfolios, proposals, and artist statements, typically in the form of digital documentation, submitted via shared folder, student-designed artist website, or other format as specified by the instructor. Both the student work and the documentation of that work is to be executed in reflection of contemporary professional standards.

To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		a. synthesize the development over time of the fundamental concepts, principles, theories, and methods, creative practices and techniques of the visual and/or performing arts. b. develop an understanding of how historical, social, cultural, and personal forces shape artistic communication and how the arts in turn share the diverse cultures of past and present societies. c. respond critically to a variety of works in the arts, connecting the individual work in the creative discipline being introduced to other aspects of human thought and endeavor.
How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.		COMM 1003 Film Lecture is a large lecture-format introductory course that examines the motion picture as an art form and as a medium of communication. More specifically, the course teaches students how to look at movies through a formal analysis of mise-en-scene, narrative form, cinematography, editing, sound and acting. We discuss film as a technical medium, learning the fundamentals of how a film is put together, and as an aesthetic medium, exploring its broader cultural impact. By the end of the course, students are able to explain and defend reasons as to why the experience of moving images should be studied and appreciated as an art form, analyze motion pictures while employing the basic tenets of “film language”, identify the responsibility of the filmmaker and viewer as communicator and audience, explain the importance of examining motion pictures within an historical context, and characterize the nature and scope of film study.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Evidence for meeting the learning indicators for Goal 3.1 will come from specific test questions administered through a series of exams, including a pre-test as well as for-credit quizzes and exams throughout the semester, using questions drawn from a test bank built by faculty responsible for teaching the course.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify and describe examples of historical and present day issues related to diversity and inclusion in the United States.  b. explain the historical and/or contemporary construction of difference through analysis of power structures, privilege, and explicit or implicit prejudice, and their roles in fostering discrimination and inequalities in the United States, whether cultural, legal, political, or social.  c. describe the advantages of inclusion by identifying and analyzing notions of inclusivity and pathways for cultivating inclusion at all levels of society, whether cultural, legal, political, or social.  d. analyze the historical and/or contemporary development of group agency and assess its role in addressing discrimination and inequalities in the United States.
	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		As stated in the justification for Goal 3.2, COMM 1003 Film Lecture includes an in-depth discussion of the broader cultural impact of film, examining issues of representation throughout film history (including issues of race, ethnicity and gender), as well as the contributions of filmmakers from different cultural and national contexts. This may take the form of a module on Women in Film, African Americans in Film, Native Americans in Film, or any number of approaches that identify and describe examples of historic al and present-day issues related to diversity and inclusion in film, primarily within the United States. This requires an historical and cultural contextualization of these issues to demonstrate how film reflects, contributes to, and radically influences cultural realities. This includes an exploration of the potential power of film and how it must be used responsibly (specifically, how historic ally marginalized communities' access to the filmmaking apparatus is a critical part of creating inclusion).

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. articulate the key concepts, principles, and overarching themes to a social science discipline.</li> <li>b. apply social scientific reasoning and techniques.</li> <li>c. analyze theories, data, and methods of a social science discipline to explain individual, group, and institutional interactions.</li> </ul>

How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.

This course introduces students to the communication processes and skills critical to interacting in a diverse society. Students examine a variety of issues focused on the ways in which persons should interact in and adjust to various communication situations in social and professional spheres, including interpersonal, intercultural, organizational, and group communication contexts. Rather than learning surface-level information pertaining to the interpersonal, organizational, intercultural, and small group contexts, students participate in exercises that provide them the opportunity for experiential learning, exposing them to the interplay between theory and praxis. The fundamental purposes of this course are to provide students with a foundational knowledge that will allow them to identify communication influences and to apply that knowledge to their communication encounters, to help them identify ways to adapt to an ever-changing society, and to identify challenges associated with communicating amongst those with different ethnicities, religious backgrounds, racial origins, and sexual identities. In addition, students learn about verbal and nonverbal communication, media influences, health communication, small group communication, family communication, and leadership. The course emphasizes becoming a competent communicator by learning to interpret the situation and context and to respond appropriately. Throughout this course, students develop a critical awareness of how their own perception alters the frames that they use to view the world. Diversity issues such as race, religion, and sexual orientations are key topics covered throughout. Students discover that the ways they identify self-influence the ways that they relate to others. Much of the class is devoted to teaching students to apply what they learn in their everyday lives—at work, at school, with their family, and with their friends. This course fits in the social science core, as defined by the undergraduate catalog, because it studies the “ideas, the behavior of individuals, groups, institutions, and their interactions” and because it “exposes students to the history of and the challenges encountered in our complex, culturally diverse world.” It also fulfills the goals of social science as defined by the National Science Foundation in that it “builds fundamental knowledge of human behavior, interaction, and social and economic systems, organizations and institutions” and those defined by the Social Science Research Council, which argues that “justice, prosperity, and democracy all require better understanding of complex social, cultural, economic, and political processes.”

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)	Assessment of the outcomes of the learning experiences occurs through tests. Students answer questions asking them to relate course contents to hypothetical situations involving different contexts of interaction. This class uses activities and discussion to learn how to connect key concepts and principles within the social sciences. Students are challenged to talk about these concepts, principles, and themes through discussion. Students explore different themes to make sense of what they see and hear and their perceptions of their own and others' identities. In addition, students look to theoretical explanations of how we create and disseminate messages and how these messages may differ based on one's view of the world. Explorations of communication influences in a variety of contexts are used to guide students in challenges they may encounter associated with diversity in individual, group, organizational, and societal settings, along with challenges created by technology. Finally, students identify ways to use these skills to adapt their communication behaviors in a dynamic, ever changing, interconnected, and global society and how to integrate these newly acquired competencies into their everyday interactions.
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. examine and interpret an intercultural experience from both one's own and another's worldview.</li> <li>b. articulate the essential tenets of a cultural worldview other than one's own through an analysis of its components, including but not limited to history, values, communication styles, politics, economy, and beliefs and practices</li> <li>c. identify and participate in cultural differences in verbal and nonverbal communication.</li> <li>d. identify and analyze significant global challenges and opportunities in the human and natural world.</li> <li>e. identify and analyze the historical and/or contemporary interrelationships among multiple global cultures.</li> </ul>

	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.	This class uses activities and discussions to (a) explore the importance of awareness in one's own and others' cultures as they exist within the United States. Students explore their own identities, both social and cultural, and (b) examine historical and contemporary constructions of difference, from race, origin, sexual identity, socio-economic status, and power based on implicit and explicit bias and prejudice. (b) Students are encouraged to examine their own performance in fostering discrimination through various forms, including but not limited to, cultural, legal, social, and political situations. Differing communication styles are analyzed, (c) and students learn the importance of verbal and nonverbal communicative practices, how verbal and nonverbal messages are created and delivered, and why and how these interactions vary from one culture to another. (d) Intercultural similarities and differences of perception, values, symbolism, and communication styles and strategies are examined, and (e) students work to identify the challenges of a global society, seeking to analyze strategies for global understanding. In addition, students look at actions of privilege and how such actions affect those around them. (d) The importance incorporating diversity and inclusion into their interactions across societal contexts is explored and students learn how to analyze those contexts that illustrate discrimination and inequalities often fostered in the United States. (c) Differing communication styles are analyzed and students learn the importance of verbal and nonverbal communicative practices, how verbal and nonverbal messages are created and delivered, and why and how these interactions vary from one co-culture to another. (e) Similarities and differences of perception, values, symbolism, and communication styles and strategies of diverse domestic groups are examined and students are encouraged to address inequities and develop skills that build equity of all citizens.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)	Group discussions and activities are utilized to vet out complex global issues and exams are used to test general understanding and to apply contexts to real and hypothetical examples.

	Justification	Admin update to typically offered.	To accomplish Learning Outcomes 3.2 and 4.1 of the University General Education Core Curriculum.
	Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 3 – Learning Outcome 3.2 Goal 4 – Learning Outcome 4.1

Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify fundamental concepts, structures, themes, and principles of the discipline being introduced. c. produce a reasonable short essay about the material introduced in the course. d. interpret texts and other created artifacts within multiple historical, intellectual, and cultural contexts. e. draw connections among cultural achievements of various groups of people of different ethnicities, religious backgrounds, racial origins, and sexual identities.
How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.		French 2003 Students will develop the ability to understand a wide variety of cultural and historical topics that are related to France and other French-speaking countries. To attain this objective, students will have ample opportunity to gain exposure to a variety of Francophone cultures. In French 2003, they will also acquire this knowledge by reading authentic literary texts and by viewing authentic film clips to gain a better understanding of various Francophone cultural contexts. In addition, they will routinely engage in dialogue about these topics with their peers and their instructor to increase their comprehension of these perspectives. These overarching goals will also be achieved through the daily use of the target language in a wide range of classroom activities, enabling students to develop their proficiency levels in reading, writing, listening and speaking French.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The instructors of French 2003 collect data by assigning homework on a daily basis and by assigning several compositions. During the semester, students also have frequent exams to assess their skills so as to track their proficiency levels in the target language.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. examine and interpret an intercultural experience from both one's own and another's worldview. b. articulate the essential tenets of a cultural worldview other than one's own through an analysis of its components, including but not limited to history, values, communication styles, politics, economy, and beliefs and practices c. identify and participate in cultural differences in verbal and nonverbal communication. e. identify and analyze the historical and/or contemporary interrelationships among multiple global cultures.
	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		French 2003 students will study a variety of intercultural experiences from their own worldview, while comparing their perspectives with people who live in the Francophone world. Through the study of readings and film clips, students will be expected to demonstrate appropriate levels of knowledge about the history and culture of Francophone people who reside in a variety of countries. In class sessions, students will also be invited to make connections and comparisons between their own culture and the diversity of cultures across the French-speaking world.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Data is collected by assigning compositions and daily homework. The instructors also give numerous exams during the course of the semester to effectively track proficiency levels for 2003 students.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.		In French 4033 (French for Oral Proficiency), students will do two five-minute oral presentations that will consist of a combination of written, oral, and multi-media components. These presentations will require research on a topic of the student's choice. To prepare their oral presentations, students will be expected to consult internet news sites, podcasts, and videos. As a follow-up to their oral presentations, which will deal with contemporary topics in the French-speaking world, students will be expected to produce a written three-page draft of their presentations, which will include a bibliography of their outside sources. This bibliography must be composed in the most recent MLA style.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The instructor will demonstrate student achievement of Learning Outcome 1.2 by collecting essays from these oral presentations. In addition, data will also be collected by the instructor's evaluation of the oral presentations. The assessment of the students' presentations will be based on the organization of their topics, the accuracy of their oral expression, and the clarity of their delivery.

How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Through a close study of representative literary works, students will acquire extensive knowledge of contemporary texts in Francophone literature. Students will develop an in-depth awareness and knowledge of Francophone literary texts, with an emphasis on the socio-political and historical contexts of various Francophone cultures. This, in turn, will enable students to acquire intercultural competency through prolonged exposure to a variety of French-speaking countries and cultures. The course will be organized thematically to enable students to identify connections, relating to topics such as identity, race, gender, oppression and 'otherness.' Students will be given ample opportunity to develop and enhance their critical thinking skills in their daily discussions, in the target language, with their peers and instructor.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The instructor will collect data by assigning several essays to be written in French. The instructor will also assess knowledge of the material by giving three exams, short quizzes, and a comprehensive final exam.

	Justification	The primary reason for this change is to clarify that this program is different from the Studio Art Program. Currently all other degree programs are clarified through their four letter codes in course such as ARED for Art Education and ARHS for Art History. This would help separate the Studio course work from the Graphic Design course work and differentiate the courses. The secondary reason is the need for Graphic Design and Studio Art to have more ability to expand the courses in the fields and we currently have a limited amount of codes and numbers to be able to expand our courses.	Changing this course to meet Gen Ed requirements.

Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?	Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)	a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise. b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work. c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose. d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness. e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.
How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.	In this research based class, students learn how to do primary and secondary research by engaging directly with source material and research participants. They learn how to articulate their research both in the written word as well as through visual and auditory presentations.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)	The course consists of weekly blog posts, one presentation about a design researcher, one presentation about a case study, one presentation about their own design strategy, as well as two additional design deliverables. Student homework and formal presentations will undergo critiques in class in which students are asked to address what they have learned in the creation process. The critiques range from one-on-one to small group to full class. Additionally, students are asked to write weekly blog posts (200-400 words) that further articulate how they are understanding the readings in relation to their field work and creation of design artifacts and proposals.

	How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.	a: students will generate presentations in all three modes. Each mode has a different audience (other students in class; a more experienced sympathetic native speaker reader; and general undergraduate learners). Students are given samples and models to follow. Revision follows feedback. b: 2 10-minute presentations; total writing: ca. 15 pages; 1 multi-media wiki. c: topic areas expand on issues briefly introduced in class discussion, readings, or listenings. d: feedback for correctness and clarity from instructor; feedback on clarity and force from student comments and engagement. e: all topics require primary and secondary source research, as well as MLA or CMoS citation.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)	Students write several papers in German in response to essay questions, one shorter research paper in German related to a longer research paper in English. Students also do 2 oral presentations on a topic related to course material, and one wiki on a lesser researched topic area. The wiki and the research papers may have some overlap. Each is graded according to a rubric that describes goals in correctness of language; correctness of content; clarity for the intended audience (gauged via questions and comments provided by students); following stated guidelines and stylistic directions. Essays written in German will also feature a post-submission reflection so that students can set goals for subsequent assignments.

To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		The course includes both oral presentations in German and three essays in German, as well as one in English, all of which require students to synthesize and integrate information and critical thinking skills from readings, lectures, and listening exercises; and to apply knowledge of the German language to expressing their analysis. All topics for these assignments focus on diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency, as the topics address comparison of U.S. American and German-speaking cultures, societies, and governance; and also address less integrated topics, such as immigration, class structures, the role of religious belief in creating cultural identity, colonialism, racism, gender, sexuality, ability, and ideas of "nation".
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Data are collected in the form of the assignments themselves as well as student feedback to most of the assignments. In both cases, the instructor is looking for evidence of communication ability; inquiry related to various areas of study combined with a German context; engagement with issues of diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging; and critical thinking. The DEIB aspect is built in to the available topic areas; evidence of critical thinking and ethical reasoning includes: posing questions about long-held assumptions or the manner in which a topic is frequently contextualized, analysis that elicits questions on the same or similar, or making connections between topic areas that illuminate potential such questions.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		This course requires students to write about a currently relevant policy issue and focuses on cultural competency and critical and ethical reasoning. For example, in Spring 2020, students wrote policy briefs about the relevant issue of immigration policy. This assignment is a written assignment, requires students to draw from earlier courses on cultural competence and to use critical thinking to propose new policies.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The third and final policy brief project described in the syllabus and in the Policy Brief Evaluation will be how data are collected that are relevant to this outcome.

	Justification	Human Development and Family Sciences faculty voted to change the prefix for HESC courses to HDFS in order to more clearly identify Human Development and Family Sciences courses. This also brings HDFS in line with both the Apparel Merchandising and Product Development and Human Nutrition and Hospitality Innovation areas, who have also recently adopted unique prefixes. Finally, it helps minimize confusion in degree program undergraduate and graduate catalogs.	This proposal is to add the honors section of Lifespan Development to the list of approved courses to meet the new General Education requirements. The non-honors section was already approved and the information about the learning outcomes and their assessments was copied and pasted from that course to this one to maintain the synchrony of these two courses.

Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course, students will (please select indicators)		b. apply social scientific reasoning and techniques. c. analyze theories, data, and methods of a social science discipline to explain individual, group, and institutional interactions. d. apply critical thinking and use scientific reasoning to evaluate claims about the social world.
How does the course meet three of five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of 5 indicators.		One focus of the course is for students to differentiate between anecdotal experiences about their own families and personal histories to examine data about patterns and variations in development and families. To do well on assignments students must be apply to understand and apply principles of theory and research to problems posed in exams. Critical thinking and scientific reasoning will be required for student to respond appropriately to course assignments.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		In general, it is expected that evidence for completion of the learning objective will come from exam questions that focus on differentiating how variations in theoretical approaches lead to differences in solving the same social problem. In fact, critical thinking process and formal operations is a topic of study in this course and completion of the task will be measured using students' assignments on this topic of study.

To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. examine and interpret an intercultural experience from both one's own and another's worldview.  d. identify and analyze significant global challenges and opportunities in the human and natural world.  e. identify and analyze the historical and/or contemporary interrelationships among multiple global cultures.
How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators?  Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Variations in development and families across cultures both within the United States and around the world are central to the purpose of this course as is evident in the adopted text and in the course assignments. The course requires students to recognize cultural patterns in development and focuses on how variations in human experiences lead to variations in developmental outcomes. The topics that focus on cultural variations in this course are too many to enumerate, but some key topics include nature v nurture debate, cultural variations in parenting, educational practices and expectations, transition to adulthood, marriage practices, and the role of older persons in societies.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Generally speaking the completion of this goal will be assessed by students' abilities to correctly identify cultural variations in these key course topics, as well as other topics. Importantly, students are challenged to examine how these cultural differences provide variations in opportunities and constraints to development across the entire lifespan.
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify and describe examples of historical and present day issues related to diversity and inclusion in the United States.  b. explain the historical and/or contemporary construction of difference through analysis of power structures, privilege, and explicit or implicit prejudice, and their roles in fostering discrimination and inequalities in the United States, whether cultural, legal, political, or social.  c. describe the advantages of inclusion by identifying and analyzing notions of inclusivity and pathways for cultivating inclusion at all levels of society, whether cultural, legal, political, or social.
How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators?  Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		This course focuses on historical prejudices against racial and sexual minorities in the United States and in other cultures. Ageism is also a topic covered extensively in this course. The course describes historical and contemporary debates about these topics and incorporates contemporary scientific approaches to show the advantages of diversity and inclusion.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		In general, the completion of the objective will be measured by student assignments that require them to correctly identify instances of injustice and the lingering effects those have had on society. In addition, students are required to correctly identify the advantages of inclusion and diversity for society in the United States and around the world.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the following five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify and describe key concepts and principles related to critical thinking. b. explain and contrast competing ethical theories, each of which articulates at least one principle for ethical decision-making. d. describe key fallacies and identify them in context.
	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Ethical principles are addressed in several concepts of this course. However, the key concepts in which these are addressed include ethical principles of research, diversity and inclusion, child abuse, and death and dying.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Generally speaking, students will be required to correctly identify policies, as well as the basic ethical principles underlying those policies. In addition, course assignments will require students to successfully identify fallacies in ethical thinking and how policies based on ethical fallacies have negatively impacted society and human achievement.

Syllabus	INST 4003 Technology and Global Affairs.pdf	INST 4003 _ PLSC 4913 Technology and Global Affairs.pdf
Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 1 – Learning Outcome 1.2 Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise. b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work. c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose. d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness. e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.
How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.		Students will read examples of strong research writing in the field and then prepare a research project in stages. The first two stages will include submission of components of the project and revision under instructor and peer supervision. The final stages will include a 20-minute oral presentation of research in accordance with disciplinary standards and submission of a finished project totaling 3,000 words (or 12 pages), plus 1,250 words of reflection. The research project will include an annotated bibliography and abstract as separate elements and must incorporate primary and secondary literature and/or data.

How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The instructor will grade the research project as a standalone grade (50% of the course grade) based on the quality of the research and writing, the oral presentation, and the revision process. The assignment grade will provide evidence for success in outcome 1.2 through an assessment of the quality and appropriateness of the writing for the audience and the student's ability to successfully respond to editorial feedback and revise the project accordingly.
To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities.  d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency.  e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.
How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Each student will select a topic related to the course and complete a significant term paper of at least 3,000 words. The project should also include an abstract, an annotated bibliography, and a reflection essay of approximately 1,250 words. The paper itself should include a literature review and a central thesis (using the best practices of critical thinking) derived from the study of primary sources. The grade for the project will be based on the quality and originality of the writing and argumentation, and the depth of research. The topics will invariably involve global issues and or transnational perspectives, and will therefore involve intercultural competency skills.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The seminar term paper, reflection essay(s), and oral presentations will be assessed as a common project grade and submitted for 6.1 assessment.
Title/Description Change Type		Minor (stylistic/editorial) Change

INST 399VH	Proposed Effective Date	Fall 2020	Fall 2021
	Is course a General Education Course?	No	Yes
	Justification	Adjusts the department code to Political Science in accordance with administrative merger of PLSC and INST.	We are applying for INST 399VH, which meets the program's capstone "Applied Global Studies" requirement, to satisfy General Education Outcome 6.1.
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities. d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency. e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.

Students will develop or complete their honors thesis projects in the course, with an emphasis on four main activities related to Outcome 6.1:

1. Research Process (30%): students will be asked to show evidence at specified times during the semester that they are on track to complete the research and writing for the thesis, including but not limited to:
 Regular communication with thesis mentor (summaries of feedback and response to feedback)
 Completion of required forms from the Fulbright Honors Program and/or Institutional Review Board (as needed).
 Substantive progress on specific research and writing tasks (e.g., proposal development, grant applications, bibliographic work, research notes, writing goals, etc.)
 Students will demonstrate progress at the end of the course through an oral presentation including multi-media components.

2. Research Plan (40%): No two thesis projects are alike, and each student's needs are different. At the beginning of the semester, each student will develop with the mentor and INST 399VH supervisor a written research and writing plan for the semester tailored to the student's need and including a proposed timeline. The plan must include production of a visual presentation of some aspect of the project and a written component totalling a minimum of 3,000 words. The written component can include one or more of the following:

- A research progress update
- A thesis or grant proposal with bibliography
- A literature review
- An analysis of a primary source
- A chapter or sub-section of the thesis
- An interview transcript and analysis
- A conference report
- A fieldwork report

3. Reflective Writing (30%): Three times during the semester, I will be giving you prompts for short two-page reflection responses. These exercises are designed to help you keep your focus on your overall project, to be mindful of the meta-learning that takes place in the course of a thesis project, and to think about how your project relates to your academic and career plans.

NB: The written and reflective components are required for meeting General Education Outcome 6.1 and beyond their role in the course grade will be grouped together for 6.1 assessment. The final product(s) will be assessed for their adherence to strong practices in written and multimodal communication, critical thinking/ethical reasoning, and global learning/intercultural competency

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The course will assess the research presentation, research essays, and reflective essays together as part of the partial or complete honors project meeting outcome 6.1.

INST 406V	Proposed Effective Date	Fall 2020	Fall 2021
	Justification	Moves course into Department of Political Science as part of INST-PLSC merger.	Places course in list of "Applied Global Topics" courses in major assessed for general education outcome 6.1
	Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities. d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency. e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		As an independent study course, the selection of study topic and course materials is at the discretion of the course instructor in consultation with the student(s) in the course. In order to meet Outcome 6.1, the course should include at a minimum the following components: A Research/Study Plan: the student and course instructor should develop a plan of study or research at the beginning of the course that clearly identifies the topic, the materials to be used, and the expected study/research outcomes. Research/Study Product: each student taking INST 406V should complete a substantive written product or multiple products totaling a minimum of 3000 words derived from course study or research. These products can include but are not limited to the following: a literature review, an original research or term paper, a substantive research or grant proposal, or a conference paper. The final paper should demonstrate competent critical thinking skills, multimodal communication and writing skills, and good practices of global learning and intercultural competency. Visual Presentation: by the end of the semester, the student should provide an oral presentation of the semester study or research incorporating such media elements as a Powerpoint slideshow, audio podcast, video presentation, or website. Reflective Essays: the student(s) in the course should write a total of 1250 words of reflection on the topic, the study/research process, and the final outcomes of the course. At the discretion of the instructor, the reflection may be written as a single essay, or it may be divided into smaller essays written over the term.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		The course instructor will assess together the research/study product (i.e., the term paper), the visual/media presentation, and the reflective essays together for assessment as an aggregated research/study outcome of the independent study course.

INST 493V	Proposed Effective Date	Spring 2020	Fall 2021
	Justification	Course is required for a new service learning study abroad model featuring a domestic and international component studying the work of social change agencies in the U.S. and selected overseas destinations. Course must be variable hour to accommodate different study abroad terms and to allow for an on-campus/domestic experience and study abroad component (i.e., embedded study abroad).	Allows INST 493V, which meets the Applied Global Studies capstone requirement in the INSTBA, to meet both the Fulbright Writing Requirement and General Education Outcome 6.1.

	Additional Notes	The pilot for this course is funded by a grant from the U.S. State Department. The grant period runs from July 2019 to June 2020. The pilot must therefore launch in the May 2020 intersession, and we request early processing to list the course for May 2020.

	Cross-listed with:	Introduction to Latin American Studies
	Justification	Course was approved by Faculty Senate for Learning Outcome 3.2, which is equivalent to the State Minimum Core domain for Humanities. Added course to State Minimum Core for Humanities to clarify the record.	The current cross-listed designation for LALS 2013/ANTH 2013 does not adequately reflect the interdisciplinary nature of the course. The LALS faculty members who are primarily responsible for teaching the course are also not in Anthropology. The recent designation of LALS 2013 as a course that fulfills the state minimum core in the humanities and the fact that LALS is in the process of developing a related introductory course to U.S. Latina/o/x Studies (which will not be cross-listed) are also reasons for this request.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		a. identify and describe examples of historical and present day issues related to diversity and inclusion in the United States. b. explain the historical and/or contemporary construction of difference through analysis of power structures, privilege, and explicit or implicit prejudice, and their roles in fostering discrimination and inequalities in the United States, whether cultural, legal, political, or social. d. analyze the historical and/or contemporary development of group agency and assess its role in addressing discrimination and inequalities in the United States.

How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.	Upon reaching this goal, students will have developed familiarity with concepts of diversity in the United States. In this course, students are introduced to the challenges and opportunities of, and of achieving, cultural diversity in North America. The ideas of migrating populations carrying their culture to new locations is discussed, as is how this is made manifest in works of landscape creation: cities, settlements, parks, agriculture, architecture, and fine-art. Established concepts such as “useful knowledge of the world”, “wilderness”, “environment” are examined critically from a range of cultural perspectives, and the hegemony of one (Euro-centric) mode of thought across the American Landscape is questioned. The role of advocacy by, and on behalf-of, indigenous communities and cultures is introduced as an often-marginalized consideration in the development of the American Landscape. In particular, the role of Manifest Destiny through the 19th Century is critically analyzed. The role of slavery in the renaissance-view of the Founding Fathers and their European forebears is discussed.

To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the following five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. identify and describe key concepts and principles related to critical thinking.</li> <li>b. explain and contrast competing ethical theories, each of which articulates at least one principle for ethical decision-making.</li> <li>c. use recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to analyze, evaluate, and respond to rational and moral argumentation presented orally and/or in writing.</li> </ul>

	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Upon reaching this goal, students will be able to demonstrate essential principles of critical thinking and ethical reasoning and apply them to the evaluation and construction of rational and moral arguments. In this course, the 20th Century rise of ecology and environmental planning, provides a key forum for students to become familiar with the key concept of the Land Ethic (Aldo Leopold) and wonder of nature and observational ecology (Rachel Carson). Differing ethical stances for the development of 20th Century urban America (the communities and streets-first ontology of Jane Jacobs vs. the efficiencies of capital approach of Robert Moses) are also introduced and discussed. The ethical and moral positions of the 18th Century romantic painters and transcendental writers, and the land-sensitive faiths of immigrant Shakers, Rappites, and social-reformers are juxtaposed with the emerging capitalist and industry-led thinking that took broad-hold across 19th Century America. Other specific ethical positions (and their strengths and weaknesses) are explored through the landscape concepts of landscape preservation (John Muir) and conservation (Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot); landscape access and enjoyment as a democratic right (Frederick Law Olmsted) and socialized housing, services and amenities (Franklin D. Roosevelt).

	Course Delivery Method	On campus Off campus	On campus
	Off Campus Delivery Justification	Online/Web-based Admin update to typically offered and delivery method.	Course proposal to satisfy General Education Learning Outcome 2.1
	Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 1 – Learning Outcome 1.2
	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes

To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must accomplish all five of the following learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)

- a. engage primarily in learning how to generate written, spoken, or multi-media presentations, receiving explicit instruction in how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations, how to follow the example of model presentations, and how to revise.
- b. complete at least 12 pages of prose collected in at least three assignments or at least three oral or multi-media presentations that last a total of at least 20 minutes or some combination of written, oral, or multi-media presentations that constitute a commensurate amount of student work.
- c. integrate effective content to be presented in a written, oral, or multi-media presentation that is appropriate to a specific context, audience, and purpose.
- d. incorporate specific feedback into written, oral, or multi-media presentations, revising and editing them for clarity, force, and correctness.
- e. incorporate and cite sources gathered from primary (observational) or secondary (bibliographic) research in written, oral, or multi-media presentations.

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.

The design projects will study and integrate spatial scale, proportion, definition and quality with use, program, or function. The projects will have a human-focused condition, where a tangible relationship between spatial constraints and human-scale will be critical to deploy analyses and design operations. The projects will study how people safely and enjoyably use space by moving within it -walking in particular- and lingering in it -seating, standing, gathering, resting-. The studio will focus on the relationship between these activities and how they are setup by physical-spatial and living and inert material conditions. These include the study of levels of social and environmental exposure and a basic introduction to comfort as defined by solar exposure, shade, and micro-climate conditions. The studio will also introduce and research the various infrastructural systems involved in the spatial types to be researched and designed, including best practices in sustainable storm-water management.

Departing from the various design exercises of the previous studio, the students will base their design operations in an iterative process where various tools -digital and analog- will be employed to integrate human conditions with physical conditions through the composition of formal-geometric ordering systems. The main digital tools to be employed include Illustrator, Autocad, and Photoshop. Analog drawing will be integrated throughout the process as a fundamental tool for a dynamic, iterative, and analytical design process.

GENERAL NOTES ON PRECEDENT PROJECTS AND DESIGN PROJECTS

All precedent studies will be individual efforts which will be shared -via presentation- with the studio. Students will perform research in order to identify a small number of options. Then, in consultation with the instructor, the students will define which project case study to further investigate, inventory, and analyze. All case studies will produce a library for the studio which will be shared in the (digital) box. Upon completion of the course each student should be able to:

- Demonstrate the ability to think critically in the process of conceptualizing and developing spatial planning and design proposals by considering issues including site and program analysis.
- Understand and demonstrate how to create appropriately scaled spaces that project to perform for a given program; and that fit a site to work with natural processes and cultural patterns.
- Demonstrate the ability to research precedent and information related to a project; and use the research as information to assist in creating design work. Additionally, as part of research, demonstrate breadth and depth

How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Design Studio Projects Evaluation criteria                  The work will need to demonstrate the student's ability to analyze, test, iterate, and develop design proposals with respect to scale, landscape systems, and formal and spatial resolution, whereby each reflects the criteria of grasp, process, and resolution as outlined: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Grasp: the work/project has clear conceptual idea that addresses the assignment's stated objectives;</li> <li>2. Process: the work/project rigorously examines, tests, and refines conceptual intent and spatial implications through the effective and appropriate use of representation models;</li> <li>3. Resolution: the work/project is complete conceptually, spatially, and technically, as demonstrated through verbal and graphic presentation.</li> </ol> Curricular Context / Design DNA                  The faculty in the Department of Landscape Architecture advocate for design based upon six factors: advocacy, history/culture, ecology/justice, urbanization, resilience, and technology. These aspects of the curriculum create a 'Design DNA' built to be timeless, relevant to contemporary practice, and be a framework for designers to be prepared for future work in landscape architecture. This Design DNA permeates all the courses in the curriculum. Designers will use all these strands to develop meaningful analysis, research, design and implementation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Advocacy helps students, faculty and practitioners collaborate and communicate their work from a perspective, one built from a collaborative and context sensitive process for the purposes of building context.</li> <li>-History/Culture is about knowledge and understanding of time and place as it relates to land and people. Using these as a foundation for action is essential.</li> <li>-Ecology/Justice is a scientific and social platform for relating people to resources equitably to establish a harmonious relationship with ecological resources.</li> <li>-Urbanization analyzing and designing for the new and future geographies of human settlement. Urbanization involves a physical spectrum from cities, to their surrounding suburbs and towns, as well as rural areas.</li> <li>-Resilience helps designers establish robust solutions that can facilitate mitigation, adaptation and transformation in a world of increasingly rapid changes and disturbance.</li> <li>-Technology is about using the appropriate tools for the development (through the research, analytical and design processes) and construction of work.</li> </ul>

LARC 4033	Proposed Effective Date	Summer 2020	Fall 2021
	Justification	When I first entered this course, I forgot that it would also be offered in Rome in the summers. This is a correction/update to the original entry.	The course proposes to meet General Education Learning Outcome 6.1
	Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
	Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
	Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
	Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
	To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities.</li> <li>c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major.</li> <li>e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.</li> </ul>

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		There will be a written report of at least 1250 words supplemented with sketching, photos and illustrations and followed up with a Pecha Kucha presentation given to the entire class. In addition to critique about the overall design of the built work, the student will examine local/regional demographics and address how this design does or does not express an awareness of diversity and/or intercultural competency. Through this specific examination and the overall critique which should compare this project to similar known successful project, the student will exhibit critical thinking. A written manifesto of a minimum 1000 words supplemented with photos, graphics, and personal sketches that reflects your views, philosophy, or outlook on your chosen professional career in response to what you have learned about landscape architecture theory and as it applies to what you have learned over your entire college experience. You will summarize your personal manifesto in a 5- minute presentation to the class.
	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Through sketching assignments, critiques of built works, a book review, group projects and a personal manifesto.

This is for the purpose of developing cultural awareness in community and urban design; to help you be able to deliver context-sensitive urban design solutions.  -Identify and participate in cultural differences in verbal and nonverbal communication in on site, first-hand experiences in the metropolitan area and its neighborhoods. This is for the purpose of being able to approach urban design from experience and empathy. By living, communicating and working in a foreign environment, you can become a better contextsensitive designer.  -Identify and analyze the historical and/or contemporary interrelationships among multiple global cultures through their urban form in scales from metropolitan infrastructure down to the urban design of neighborhoods the drawing comparative analyses to similar scale. This is for the purpose of intercultural awareness and the ability to have a rich store of models for urban design benchmarked against the context of the United States.

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? -Demonstrate the use of drawing (catch all term for exploration in all media from computer modeling, to hand and digital drawing, to augmented reality and physical modeling) as a robust, vigorous and consistent method for each class meeting of the semester. This is for the purposes of developing an outstanding design process and professional habits and practices.

-Demonstrate the use of drawing for inquiry: the ability to use drawing to discover intuitive, unseen, or unknown factors in the design process. This is for the purposes of creating outstanding design work and developing professional practices.

-Demonstrate the use of drawing for extraction: the ability to use directed inquiry with precision - examples of extraction include mapping and overlay processes in inventory and analysis. This is for the purposes of developing professional practices.

-Demonstrate the use of drawing for conclusions by using robust, broad, and iterative drawing and modeling processes for the purposes of being able to develop design across scale and time to a high degree as professionals must.

-Demonstrate the ability to develop a viable design process, beginning with site inventory and analysis and programming, continuing with the formation of concepts for design exploration, schematic design options, design development and the clear communication of design intent framed with analysis, guidelines and legible presentation in images/models/movies/interactive interfaces for stakeholders.

-Demonstrate the ability to develop cohesive design as a response to a brief from modeling and consideration of multiple factors including as examples: scale, comfort, drainage, and significant site and program factors.

-Demonstrate the ability to use site analysis, program development, and a client brief as the framework for the design of sites.

-Demonstrate the ability to create appropriately sited, scaled and defined spaces on a site that operate within a functional framework and provide legibility to the users of the design.

	Can this course be repeated for degree credit?	Yes	No
	Total credits allowed	99
	Total completions	99
	Are multiple enrollments allowed in a term?	Yes	No
	Topics	Topics already exist.
	Create Honors Course?	No	Yes
	Catalog Title	Special Topics in Music History	Capstone Project Seminar
	Short Course Title	SPECIAL TOPICS IN MUSIC	CAPSTONE PROJECT SEMINAR
	Catalog Description	Specialized topics not extensively covered in MUHS 3703 or MUHS 3713. Satisfactory completion of the term paper in this class will fulfill the Fulbright College writing requirement.	Develop a project related to a specific area of musical study. Options include musicological research papers, music theoretical analyses, music cognition research projects, performance lecture recitals, and recording projects with a written component.

Justification

Admin update to undergrad only for dual level conversion. New grad level course is MUHS 5253.

In response to both the new University of Arkansas General Education Curriculum requirements set to take effect in the fall of 2020 and the shifting needs of our students in an era characterized by unprecedented access to information and diverse, multi-faceted musical careers, we propose changes to the undergraduate music history curriculum. The undergraduate music history curriculum consists of MLIT 1013, MUHS 3703, MUHS 3713, with MUHS 4253 taken by non-music education majors. MLIT 1013, MUHS 3703, MUHS 3713 will be used to satisfy Learning Objective 1.2 while MUHS 4253 will be used for Objective 6. MLIT 1013 will remain the same, while the other courses will be modified to better meet the specified learning objectives.

In recent years, a number of undergraduate music programs have moved away from traditional survey classes as an ever-expanding canon has brought the always-impossible goal of a comprehensive history of Western music even further out of reach. Instead, new curricula at peer institutions, such as Vanderbilt, Harvard, and Eastman, have shifted in the direction of course offerings that emphasize musicological skills and depth of knowledge in selected areas over breadth. The program proposed here will place greater weight on the development of information literacy, writing skills, understandings of diverse musical cultures, and skills for approaching the study of music history from a variety of perspectives.

In this course, students will learn and practice research skills that will help them to plan and execute a major project in their specific areas of musical study. Over the course of the semester, students will read and discuss various examples of music scholarship representing a range of approaches from the music theory and musicology literature. Through a series of shorter assignments, students will build toward an individual capstone project that draws on skills from all areas of their undergraduate program, integrating research, academic music skills, and some form of public presentation or performance. These projects may take the form of lecture recitals for performers or composers; theory or musicology papers, presentations, and/or posters; recording projects or curated concerts with detailed liner or program notes organized by business or B.A. students; or other appropriate projects designed in collaboration with the instructor. At the end of the semester, students will write a 1250-word reflection describing how their project integrated three sets of skills from the General Education Curriculum.

MUHS 4253 Special Topics in Music History, currently cross-listed with graduate seminars in musicology, will become a capstone project class for all non-education music majors geared toward undergraduate-level research skills and student-designed projects.

When courses were solicited for possible inclusion for the core in November/December of 2018, there wasn't an option to submit a course for Learning Objective 6, nor is it an option on this page.

Is course a General Education Course?		Yes
Choose the learning outcome the course addresses:		Goal 6 – Learning Outcome 6.1
Do all instructors of this course agree to incorporate these learning indicators into their sections – and include related information on their syllabus?		Yes
Do all instructors of this course agree to develop, collect, and report (through Blackboard or other system as specified) direct evidence that students have met the learning outcomes?		Yes
To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities		a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities. c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major. e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.
How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Students in this course will develop a capstone project related to their specific area of musical study. Options include musicological research papers, music theoretical analyses, music cognition research projects, performance lecture recitals, and recording projects with a written component. All students will complete written material related to their project in the form of papers, scripts, or liner notes and give an oral presentation (a). In these projects, they will use skills from Goal 3 to connect the musical content of their projects to broader historical, societal, and/or scientific concepts (b and e). Following completion of the project, students will write a 1250-word reflective essay explaining the skills and abilities used in the process of researching, writing, and presenting their work.
How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		Instructors will collect written documents associated with each project and keep records of oral presentations and musical performances.

PBHL 3202H	Proposed Effective Date	Fall 2020	Fall 2021
	Prerequisite(s)	Public Health Bachelor of Science (PBHLBS) major required.	Public Health Bachelor of Science (PBHLBS) major and honors standing required.
	Pre- or Corequisite(s)	PBHL 1103, PBHL 3443, and honors standing.
	Justification	The Council on Education for Public Health accredited the B.S. program July of 2019. However, they are requiring an interim report by April 22 that details how we have corrected any noted deficiencies during their program review. One of the deficiencies noted was a failure to comply with Criterion 1.2 which specifies that the program has administrative autonomy regarding admission to the program. CEPH indicated that failure to come into compliance with all accreditation criteria must trigger specific actions on CEPH's part, which includes revocation of accreditation. Therefore, the program has examined similar programs at comparable institutions and has drafted an admissions protocol. PBHL 3202H is one of five courses that have been designated as a majors only course that can only be taken by students that have met the PBHLBS major requirement.	The PBHL program has added a pre-major (PPBHL) so students will need to complete a defined set of courses prior to moving into the major, which will eliminate the need to use specific courses as prerequisites. Learning outcome 5.1 has been addressed.

	To be certified as meeting this outcome, a course or approved sequence of courses must incorporate at least three of the following five learning indicators. In an approved course or approved sequence of courses, students will (please select indicators)		c. use recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to analyze, evaluate, and respond to rational and moral argumentation presented orally and/or in writing. d. describe key fallacies and identify them in context. e. demonstrate the use of recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to construct complex rational and moral arguments orally and/or in writing.
	How does the course meet three of the five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		Lectures and discussions will teach the students how to: 1)use recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to analyze, evaluate, and respond to rational and moral argumentation presented orally and/or in writing. 2)describe key fallacies and identify them in context. 3)demonstrate the use of recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to construct complex rational and moral arguments orally and/or in writing. This is done with Small Group Activities Each student will also complete small group activities that reinforce class material throughout the semester. For each activity, group members will be asked to elect a group leader and a note-taker to record their work so that it can be reported to the class. Small group activity on comparative health systems (Learning Outcome 5.1): students demonstrate essential principles of critical thinking and ethical reasoning as they discuss and complete questions on healthcare as a right or a privilege. They then apply these principles to the evaluation and construction of rational and moral arguments surrounding access to healthcare.

	How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.		The course will vary from year to year depending on the instructor, the number of students, and the interests of the students. Indicator a. will be addressed through presentations and papers, in addition to student responses to critiques. The course will include study of philosophical methods as suggested in indicator c. and different versions will focus on the significance of the arts, the social sciences, and the natural sciences. Indicator d. will be addressed throughout in research papers and presentations as students will have to compare and contrast their perspectives and views with those of others (including radically different viewpoints). For indicator e., critical thinking will be fostered through the course as at the heart of philosophy, and ethical reasoning will often be a direct part of the content of the course; students will be able to pursue various accounts of practical reason as part of their research.

	Off Campus Delivery	Study Abroad
	Maximum Credit Hours	3	6

Title/Description Change Type	Minor (stylistic/editorial) Change
Justification	There are four reasons to make this change: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. The honors thesis credit hours should be applied toward the major. This is simply because of the fact that when earning them, a student is studying something related to PLSC in a way that is even more in-depth and involving a greater amount of effort than would be the case in a regular upper-division PLSC course.</li> <li>2. The change clears up some ambiguity in the Undergraduate Catalog. There is no mention in the text of the description of PLSC honors of the fact that the PLSC 499VH hours do not count toward the major. The only indication that PLSC 499VH hours do not count toward the major is in the language in the course description of PLSC 499VH that we wish to delete. Thus, a student reading the program description of PLSC honors who fails to read the course description of PLSC 499VH could easily be given the mistaken impression the six hours of honors thesis credits could count toward their major. In fact, this has happened more than once.</li> <li>3. The change clears up some conflict in the text in the Undergraduate catalog. In the text of the catalog under "Requirements for B.A. Degree with a Major in Political Science," there is a statement which reads: "No more than 9 hours may come from PLSC 300V, PLSC 394V, PLSC 498V, or PLSC 499VH." This would seem to indicate that six hours of PLSC 499VH could, in fact, count towards the major, provided a student has not taken more than three hours of any of these other courses.</li> <li>4. By making this change, PLSC will no longer be the only department in Fulbright College that prohibits honors thesis hours from being counted towards the major. The extant language seems to be a relic from a time when it was convention for departments to prohibit honors thesis hours to count toward their major requirements. This is no longer the case, yet PLSC remains an anachronism. We would like to change this.</li> </ol>	We are applying for PLSC 499VH to satisfy General Education Outcome 6.1. Also, for whatever reason, this honors theses class was previously listed as course that could be delivered off-campus via studying abroad. This was an error and it is being fixed with this modification.

How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)

Learning Indicators for Learning Outcome 5.1 Demonstrate critical thinking and ethical reasoning

In this course students will:

a. identify and describe key concepts and principles related to critical thinking.

Students will develop strategies and acquire conceptual tools for critical discourse analysis plus a set of theoretical approaches to analyze literary and cultural texts.

c. use recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to analyze, evaluate, and respond to rational and moral argumentation presented orally and/or in writing.

Students will read critically and analyze a variety of texts from different historical periods of the Hispanic world, their rhetorical strategies and narrative structures, using different theoretical approaches for the analysis of culture and society, considering factors such as race, gender and class.

e. demonstrate the use of recognized principles of critical thinking or ethical reasoning to construct complex rational and moral arguments orally and/or in writing.

Students will write one or two research papers analyzing the discursive structure and/or rhetorical strategies of a selection of texts or topics from a particular theoretical approach to understand its relation to its historical and cultural milieu, its expressed purposes, presuppositions and contradictions; ethical and political implications; epistemological value or flaws.

In order to determine that these designated learning outcomes are accomplished, student work in the course will be assessed via the following instruments, based on the A-F grading scheme:

*Classroom and homework assignments analyzing a variety of texts, its historical and cultural contexts, and small group activities focused on particular topics or issues (outcome a, c, e.), producing written or oral responses.

*Exams analyzing particular texts, works, issues in short essay form (outcomes a, c, e)

*Two short research papers (4-5 pp. each) analyzing particular texts, works, issues in short essay form (outcomes a, c, e)

To be certified as meeting this outcome, an assignment must require the student, as part of a credit-bearing course, (a) to produce a significant written paper, as defined by his or her major, or an equivalent project incorporating performance and/or multi-modal text and/or images; and (b) to explain in an additional document of at least 1250 words the degree to which the completed assignment involves at least three of the following sets of skills and abilities

- a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities.
- c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major.
- d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency.
- e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

How does the course or sequence of courses meet three of the five sets of skills and abilities? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses 3 of the 5 indicators.

University Learning Outcome 6.1 indicators

a. Written, oral, and/or multimodal communication abilities.

Students will write two research paper(s) demonstrating advanced Spanish writing and effective communication skills

In the Reflective essay, Students must reflect on the writing process, discussing the ways in which the research project improved their Spanish writing skills and their academic writing skills in general, from source gathering to the expository organization of the final essay. (extension 400-450 words)

c. Characteristics of inquiry and action in the major and in one of the Learning Outcomes under Goal 3 besides the disciplinary area of the major.

The students research paper(s) for this course must demonstrate the ability to produce scholarship that follows standards of inquiry for literary studies and the humanities

In the Reflective essay, Students must discuss briefly the project research question and methodological considerations such as the primary corpus and the time frame selection, developing and supporting arguments, examining presuppositions and conclusions. (extension 400-450 words)

d. Diversity awareness and/or intercultural competency.

The students research paper(s) must demonstrate intercultural competence and knowledge of issues related to diversity, inclusion, and equality in the Hispanic world and/or the U.S. Latinx context

In the Reflective essay, Students will describe how their research on the Hispanic world addressed cultural and social differences, issues of diversity, equality, and inclusion. Also, in what ways did their understanding of the Hispanic world and their own culture was changed by the research project. (extension 400-450 words)

e. Critical thinking and/or ethical reasoning.

Students Research paper(s) will analyze the discursive structure and rhetorical strategies of a selection of texts or topics from a particular theoretical approach to understand its relation to its historical and cultural milieu, its expressed purposes, presuppositions and contradictions; ethical and political implications; epistemological value or flaws

In the Reflective essay, Students may discuss the research topic importance, its contributions to a better understanding of the Hispanic world and the human experience in general. Address different and conflicting perspectives and values encountered.

Furthermore, students should discuss briefly how their project allowed them to develop an understanding of how historical, social, cultural, and personal forces shape artistic, professional, and/or dialectal communication/production. If applicable, they should explain how language and/or artistic production share the diverse cultures of past and present societies. (extension 400-450 words)

How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)

In order to determine that these designated learning outcomes for Goal 6.1 are accomplished, student work in the course will be assessed via the following two instruments, based on the A-F letter grading scheme:

*Two 4-5 page Research papers analyzing particular texts, works, issues in short essay form (outcomes a,c,d,e).

* A 1,250 word Reflective essay based on the process of developing the two research papers (outcomes a,c,d,e)

Additional Notes

SPAN 4133 is the model course for meeting General Education Goals 5 and 6. Our plan is to submit other SPAN 4000 level literature and culture courses including

How does the course meet all five learning indicators? Please describe (in 400 words or less) how the course addresses all 5 indicators.

This course meets the five learning indicators through a variety of assignments that require students to synthesize and relate knowledge about history, society and the evolution of the art form of theatre during the 20th and 21st century. The purpose of this course is to study the development of theatrical production in its cultural context. The student will develop a basic understanding of the dramatic experience and become familiar with the known elements of theatrical practice in a wide variety of cultures. The primary emphasis will be on historical evidence including representative plays, theatre architecture, the stage, scenery, costume, acting, directing, and modes of production, and exploring aspects of theatrical performance, by considering how theatre reflects politics, society, economics, philosophy and ideology.

Students will learn how to generate written, spoken and multi-media presentations learning how to analyze audiences and rhetorical situations.

Students will complete at least three written assignments of at least 12 pages of prose total.

Students will also present a multi-media presentation to share research.

Students will be led through a revision and refining process of first and second drafts, revising for clarity, force and correctness.

Students will incorporate and cite sources gathered from secondary research in their written, oral and multi-media presentations.

	How would the course instructor collect data to demonstrate student achievement of the Learning Outcome? (i.e. test questions; essays; homework assignments; presentations; etc.)		For this course, students are required to relate artistic ideas and works with societal, cultural and historical context to deepen their understanding. They will demonstrate their competency through weekly essay-based homework assignments, a multi-phased collaborative group research project and multi-media and oral presentations and a final exam. Students in this course will: 1. Develop and understanding of the development of theatre and its history through the context of play reading and primary texts. [weekly essay-based homework assignments and in-class discussions of readings] 2. Effectively apply analytical and critical skills in understanding and evaluating play scripts, theatrical performances, and theatre criticism [Critical Review Paper] 3. Research and write a Précis grounded in appropriate secondary sources. [Précis Paper] Preliminary assignments will enable you to master essential elements of the Précis paper: a. Read and analyze the secondary sources; b. Preliminary Draft: Drawing from your sources and using the analytical skills you have developed, write a preliminary version of your Précis paper; c. Engage in essential revision of your Précis paper 4. Show, through multi-media and oral presentation, an understanding of a scholarly articles and demonstrate an ability to convey that understanding to an audience of their peers. [Multi-phased collaborative group research project] 5. Without notes or reference materials, write short essays in your own words with sufficient detail and interpretation [final exam]
